

Incursions Of Nazi Planes Over Sweden Protested To Berlin

STOCKHOLM, April 22.—Sweden protested strongly to Berlin today against incursions by Nazi warplanes over her territory and asked measures to prevent repetition of flights which "yesterday were especially numerous and grave."

Faced with a steadily expanding Nazi air force, Sweden already had taken emergency precautions to prevent the country from infringing on its neutrality.

Fast moving columns of British and French troops, striking swiftly into Norway's coast, were reported today engaged in a series of fierce clashes with German forces in the Trondhjem and Oslo fronts.

FULL-FLEDGED WAR
The conflict in Norway was shaping up as a full-fledged war, with modern style, with perhaps 100,000 men in the field—British, French, Norwegian, and German, some moving behind tanks and others attacking under cover of artillery and aerial bombardment.

Recent points of the fighting apparently were Verdal, 28 miles north of Trondheim, and Elverum, 60 miles north of Oslo, near the Swedish frontier. Approximately 300 miles of rough terrain separates the two battle fronts.

The fighting around Verdal, according to Swedish sources, developed when Allied forces, driving south after effecting a landing at Narvik, attempted to break the German hold on the 100-mile railway line linking that port with Trondheim, the key to central Norway.

WINDSWEPT IN FLAMES
Verdal, doubly important because it lies on the railway line and is a border 30 miles away, was reported in flames as the opposing forces fought for its possession.

The Norwegian league here announced that the north moving German column, supported by troops had attacked the German at Elverum after dislodging the Swedish forces from Hamar, 50 miles to the west.

The progress of the fighting in this area, however, was confused by German claims that Nazi troops had reached Lillehammer, 35 miles north of Verdal, and that the German commander said the Germans had attacked Lillehammer respectively from the air but not by land, but did not say it had fallen.

ONE SHOT DOWN
A British anti-aircraft battery under strict orders to guard against any border violations, fired warning shots at two German planes which flew over fortified islands in the Oslo fjord last night and shot down one of the craft when it failed to veer off. The crew of four was rescued.

Several other planes passed over Oslo Sunday, and one was shot down during the night, and two German planes made forced landings on the Oslo fjord, and were taken to sea. They were burned by their crews who were interned.

The Göteborg Posten, one of Sweden's largest newspapers, declared that the Germans have been making renewed and deliberate flights over Swedish territory, and that the purpose of photographing fortifications. The paper called for stronger aerial defense measures, noting that Adolf Hitler had remarked that Germany would not be satisfied if Sweden is not neutral.

Sweden has been stepping up her "neutral defense" ever since the outbreak of the Russo-Finnish war in November. At present, a number of troops now under arms remain a military secret, but in former source said that Sweden's preparations to maintain its neutrality are virtually complete.

Drumheller, Alta., April 22.—The Michichi Creek, which was rising steadily during the weekend, is calm but high this morning. There has been a drop of approximately 18 inches in the water level.

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin
Drumheller, Alta., April 22.—At ten o'clock Sunday night the Michichi Creek was still slowly rising, threatening more homes in North Drumheller and washing through ground floor windows of many a dwelling within reach of the lower portions of the subdivision.

One small home, directly on the path of the onrushing water, was completely submerged while two stretches of the Saskatchewan highway were under water. Three bridges also were washed out.

More than 40 families are suffering from the latest flood, the majority of whom have sought shelter with friends in other parts of the city. The creek waters will subside, and almost beyond reach of all-in their homes with water on all sides of them.

Just one week ago, some 400 families were evacuated when the Red Deer river plied ice and water over the banks at the same spot. The Michichi Creek, which drains into the Red Deer, is now rising.

Drumheller father bridge at that time was a striking scene, scarcely 10 feet wide Sunday night. The water was as wide as the river bed, and the water was rising to the level of the houses on the foot of the Mounion hill over a mile away to sweep through the town.

Reports from Michichi are to the effect that the dam at the head of the creek, was holding up with no danger of water breaking through.

German and Nazis are connected by road with Steinkjer. From this town the road winds south-west along the shore of Trondheim fjord through Levanger and Bodø in Trondheim.

Allied troops are moving steadily along this road, with nothing to stop them except occasional attacks from the Germans.

I learned that other Allied forces which landed due south of Trondheim were at the same time marching northward, and the Germans holding the north had been cut off from any except air aid.

Royalty Escapes

Three minutes was the slim margin by which Norway's Crown Prince Olaf (above) and King Haakon escaped possible death or injury when Nazi aircraft bombed the Norwegian headquarters at Nyerung. The nearby woods to which they escaped were machine-gunned, but the King and Prince escaped.

One of his homes was Haddon Hall, Derby, famed home of Dorothy and Sir John, 18th century beauty who eloped with one of his ancestors. The king returned for his ancestral home in safety despite fire from German aircraft.

Three weeks before that experience he struggled back from Germany with his escape kit and his plane on fire. He managed to submerge his aircraft behind the Magdalen Line. His face was bruised and bleeding from acid fumes, he collapsed in a faint as he climbed out.

After recovering from his latest exploits the young King of Norway stands more than six feet tall. He was his first escape since joining his exiled court in France several months ago. He went straight to his mother to comfort the mother of a flying friend who was recently killed.

Asked what he thought of the Germans as air fighters, "Cobler" said: "I can only speak from personal experience and that is whatever I saw. I saw them as a very dangerous force. The British don't mind having a scrap. But when we come across them in numbers anywhere equal to our own, they put their noses down and run."

DUKE IS ASKED TO LET ITALY FIGHT ENEMIES

ROME, April 22.—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, tonight published a telegram addressed to the Duke of Windsor, asking him to "lend your hands" to "fight our enemies better than the borden."

Friday the newspaper criticized Allied blockade methods and said that Italy's "hour of destiny" was at hand.

Three minutes was the slim margin by which Norway's Crown Prince Olaf (above) and King Haakon escaped possible death or injury when Nazi aircraft bombed the Norwegian headquarters at Nyerung.

One of his homes was Haddon Hall, Derby, famed home of Dorothy and Sir John, 18th century beauty who eloped with one of his ancestors. The king returned for his ancestral home in safety despite fire from German aircraft.

Three weeks before that experience he struggled back from Germany with his escape kit and his plane on fire. He managed to submerge his aircraft behind the Magdalen Line. His face was bruised and bleeding from acid fumes, he collapsed in a faint as he climbed out.

After recovering from his latest exploits the young King of Norway stands more than six feet tall. He was his first escape since joining his exiled court in France several months ago. He went straight to his mother to comfort the mother of a flying friend who was recently killed.

Asked what he thought of the Germans as air fighters, "Cobler" said: "I can only speak from personal experience and that is whatever I saw. I saw them as a very dangerous force. The British don't mind having a scrap. But when we come across them in numbers anywhere equal to our own, they put their noses down and run."
